INDEX-LEXICON TO THE OLD TESTAMENT.

EXPLANATORY NOTE.—Regarding these index-lexicons, see reviser's preface. They are dictionaries and indexes to parallel passages. They show all the meanings of the original Greek, Hebrew, and Aramaic words in the Bible, and the number of times each occurs in our English version. Rare words, occurring once or twice, and, therefore, often of doubtful meaning, may be recognised by means of this record, and the large numbers are sometimes a useful guide to the most literal meaning of a word. Whenever the translation is clearly not literal it is marked by * or † (see below). Meanings of frequent occurrence are sometimes marked freq., and in a few unimportant cases the number is entirely omitted. The index-lexicons are also, particularly, a means of finding all, or most, of the passages where the same original word is used in the Bible. The concordance already places together under each English word the passages which belong to the same original. The index, by giving all the meanings of that original, shows what English words in the concordance must be turned up to find other passages where it is used. It will be found that the best index of such parallels must also be a lexicon. In the case of a Hebrew verb, for instance, it should be noticed that the only exact parallels to a Hiph. are Hiph. meanings, to a Piel, Piel meanings, etc. The verb has generally different meanings, according as it is a Hiph. or one of the other verb forms (indicated in the concordance by the Nos. 1-7; see general preface). Words in italic capitals are Aramaic, not Hebrew. Aramaic words identical with Hebrew have not always been printed separately.
